

Brief Description of the Program

Profession

- An international analyst is a specialist in public diplomacy and world politics. Graduates can work in international organizations both in their own country and abroad, having a good command of several foreign languages.

Educational process

A highly professional teaching staff is involved in the teaching and learning process. Training programs cover the widest range of issues that are most relevant at this stage in the development of international relations. Some of the programs are implemented jointly with universities of Luxembourg, the Czech Republic, Palestine, Macedonia, the United States and other countries. This allows students not only to listen to lectures by foreign professors, but also to undergo an internship at leading universities in the world. From the first days of training, students learn to cope with difficult and unpredictable situations, to solve their professional tasks. Teaching and learning are based on a game-theoretic approach, a brainstorming method and a simulation method based on modern computer technologies. The training is related to the development of skills for working with expert materials, their assessment and the independent preparation of basic analytical and prognostic documents. This is facilitated by the study of several foreign languages.

Thematic discussions, master classes conducted by leading specialists in the area, participation in international competitions, communication with potential employers form professional competencies of future specialists in international affairs.

Disciplines

- ✓ Foreign language
- ✓ Theory of international relations
- ✓ History of international relations
- ✓ British imperial space
- ✓ International integration and international organizations
- ✓ Theory and history of diplomacy
- ✓ International relations of Russian regions
- ✓ International conflicts in the modern world
- ✓ Russian-American relations
- ✓ Ethnology and world religions
- ✓ Ethnopolitology
- ✓ Modern international relations
- ✓ Foreign policy decision-making
- ✓ World politics
- ✓ National and world economy
- ✓ Political problems of international relations
- ✓ Migration as a factor of modern Russian politics
- ✓ Mathematical methods in political research
- ✓ Political vocabulary in a foreign language
- ✓ Regions of peace in international relations
- ✓ Law
- ✓ Political rhetoric
- ✓ State and international law
- ✓ Political geography
- ✓ Russia in global politics

Practical training

The educational program includes three types of practical trainings.

Practical training in obtaining primary professional skills is conducted in the structural units of the university. The purpose of this practical training is to deepen and consolidate scientific and theoretical knowledge of students in the field of international relations, contributing to the formation of professional competencies in International Relations, as well as to develop research work skills.

The purpose of practical training in obtaining professional skills and professional experience is to consolidate and deepen theoretical knowledge gained during training, as well as to gain experience in the implementation of projects in a specific area of activity, to develop skills for solving technical, organizational and managerial tasks independently. The practical training is held in international organizations, as well as government bodies in the cities of Tambov, Moscow, Voronezh, St. Petersburg, etc. (Administration of the Tambov Region, Administration of the City of Tambov, Tambov Regional Duma, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Russian Federation, Federation Council of the Russian Federation, State Duma of the Russian Federation, various business structures engaged in international activities, etc.).

The purpose of the pre-graduation practical training is the acquisition by students of practical skills and competencies in the field of professional activity, consolidation, deepening and systematization of theoretical knowledge obtained at the university, selection of necessary information to complete the final qualification work (bachelor's thesis).

Career

Graduates can make an academic career by continuing their education doing master's and PhD degree programs. After graduation, they can continue their education in the field of international relations, world politics and economics, financial analytics, law, journalism and public relations.

Specialists in international relations can find application to their professional skills in government institutions, trade, financial and commercial organizations cooperating with different countries. Such workers are indispensable in travel agencies. These experts can also find their vocation in science, teaching or journalism.

Bachelor's degree in international relations allows graduates to get a job as referents or translators in state bodies, governmental and non-governmental organizations, scientific and educational institutions. After completing the program, you can work as a translator, guide, expert, consultant or manager. All these areas are united by the fact that the job involves contacts with representatives of different countries.